State of Missouri Growth Model Job Aid: Identifying Development Opportunities

Before you ENGAGE, consider this...

After you have thought about your capability levels, answer the questions below to think through your approach to your upcoming ENGAGE conversations.

1. Before you even think about your development, what are three things that are important to you?

2. How are these things tied to your developmental opportunities? For instance, do you enjoy working on anything specific? Do you want to avoid working on anything?

3. How self-aware are you? Are there any blind spots (e.g., development areas you're not aware of)? What are they?

4. Think of one capability area where you could move a level up if you mastered a strength you already have:

5. Think of one capability area where if you moved a level up, it would enhance your performance:

6. What is the area where you think you're most likely to succeed if coached to the next level?

7. Take a look at some of the pitfalls related to your answers in questions 4-6. Which ones are most likely to be difficult for you? Which would be easiest?

8. Re-read your answers to the first 7 questions. Based on all of that, where would you start your first ENGAGE conversation? Why? Remember to start with their interests and needs, but add your own ideas from this exercise when it's appropriate.
